ASYLUM: STAY IF YOU'RE GAY

A WHITEHALL whistleblower has accused the Government of letting thousands of failed asylum seekers use "lies and false excuses" to stay in the UK.

Refugees facing the boot have been given a reprieve after claiming they are gay, have cheated on their partners or suffer from problems such as headaches, nightmares or

SOMBRE: William sings at the service

Britain salutes its heroes

by STEPHEN RIGLEY

PRINCE WILLIAM joined 9,000 veterans yesterday to pay tribute to Britain's war dead. Wills, 22, and his grandmother, the Queen, led the country in the National Service of Remembrance at the Cenotaph in London.

This year, Britain's annual Remembrance Day tributes also included the 74 military personnel who have been killed in Iraq.

William, with Sophie, Countess of Wessex, watched the wreath-laying and parade from a balcony in the Foreign Office, overlooking Whitehall.

His father, the Prince of Wales, who was 56 yesterday, laid a poppy wreath, along with the Queen, the Duke of Edinburgh, the Duke of York, the Princess Royal and the Duke of Kent.

Political leaders, headed by Tony Blair, also laid wreaths.

The Black Watch remembered their fallen at a special service at Camp Dogwood in Iraq yesterday. A prayer was offered for five of the regiment killed in the past two weeks.

Love cheat's got the hump

by JERRY LAWTON

TORY golden boy Boris Johnson plans to quit politics after being sacked from the front bench for lying over his affair with writer Petronella Wyatt.

Conservative leader Michael Howard axed the Shadow Arts Minister after it was revealed Petronella, 34, underwent a secret abortion last month as a result of their three-year fling.

Last week Johnson, editor of The Spectator, denied the affair and described reports of it as "an inverted pyramid of piffle".

But Petronella's mum revealed her daughter had fallen pregnant to the married dad-of-four, and had got rid of the baby. Johnson, 40, was swiftly "relieved of his responsibilities" by Mr Howard - not for having an affair but for lying to cover it up.

Bitter

But Johnson's pals last night insisted he had not lied to the Tory leader.

"Boris did not at any stage mislead Michael Howard," one said.

"They only had one conversation about this and that was yesterday afternoon."

Last night bitter Boris was fuming at his treatment by Tory bigwigs and considering getting out of politics.

He feels he's been stabbed in the back by jealous colleagues.

He would not discuss the state of his marriage to Marina, 37, when he arrived at a friend's home where he has been staying - wearing the same clothes he's had on all week.

When asked about his clothes, he said: "I'm a man of thrift and economy."

A close pal said: "He's had enough. He's talking about jacking it in. He feels he's been hung out to dry."

OUT: Boris last night - in the same clothes - and, right, his ex-lover Petronella

Fall of Fallujah

REBEL stronghold Fallujah is now in coalition hands after six days of fighting, US military chiefs in Iraq said last night.

More than 1,200 insurgents have been killed, said US Marines Major General Richard Natonski. Six Iraqi soldiers and 31 Americans have died in the battle to liberate the city, and the number of US wounded is 275.

KERRY: I DON'T CARE WHAT HE'S DAN I'm playing around too

ARM REST: Kerry and Dan

EXCLUSIVE ■ by MARIANNA PARTASIDES

LOVED-UP telly babe Kerry Katona yesterday revealed she couldn't care less if new squeeze Dan Corsi has another girl.

The jungle queen claimed she's also secretly dating other men when she's apart from love-cheat DJ Dan.

"I'm certainly talking to other guys so why shouldn't he talk to other girls?" said the 24-year-old blonde, who split from husband Brian McFadden in September.

"It's still early days for us. There are so many other things going on at the moment. He's not the only guy."

And curvy Kerry showed just how much fun she is having since her break-up with ex-Westlife hunk Brian when she went wild on another drunken night in London on Saturday.

First she went to Trap club to see 30-year-old DJ Dan play a set.

Steamy

Then the pair carried on to celeb haunt Pangaea - and couldn't keep their hands off each other. When they finally left, Kerry - who decided to ditch her married name this weekend - looked the worse for wear.

But pals said it's all part of learning to enjoy her freedom away from Brian, 24. She and 30-year-old Dan - who first dated six years ago - enjoyed a steamy night together soon after the break-up, when Dan was still living with girlfriend Anita Warren.

Now it has emerged dirty Dan has been sending flirt texts to another old flame, Pippa Kapp.

Friends said he is just helping Kerry get over Brian and it's not serious yet.

"This is just what she needs right now," said one pal. It's been a difficult time for her and Dan's a tonic.

"She really doesn't care about other women. She's in touch with other guys too. It's a new phase in her life and she's enjoying it.

"It's still early days for them so she's not reading too much into it." And with telly job offers flooding in Kerry - who won I'm A Celebrity earlier this year - is focusing on her career more than her love-life.

She hosted pop show cd:UK last Saturday and is starring in celebrity challenge show With A Little Help From My Friends this Saturday.

The pal added: "She's getting stronger every day now, and Dan is a big part of that. But she knows work is the main thing at the moment."

20 years on, Geldof pleads once more:

SEND US YOUR ROCKIN' MONEY

APPEAL: Bob Geldof yesterday

SIR Bob Geldof kicked off the UK's most stunning musical event for 20 years yesterday by urging fans: "Send us your rockin' money."

A star-studded line-up gathered at a north London studio to record a new version of the legendary Band Aid single Do They Know It's Christmas?

Sir Bob, 50, claimed the disc – featuring the likes of Robbie Williams, Dido, Justin Hawkins, Coldplay's Chris Martin and Jamelia – was "firing the starting pistol" for a massive new fund-raising push for Africa. His original drive in 1984, which included

by PAUL GREAVES and NIGEL PAULEY

the huge Live Aid gig, raised more than £100million for starving people in Ethiopia. The singer's passion boiled over then as he stunned TV viewers with the direct demand: "Give us your fing money."

Now the new single will raise money for famine relief in the Darfur region of Sudan. Fans waited outside the Hampstead studio as a parade of singing heroes arrived.

One of the first was Chris Martin, 27, who was soon joined by Darkness star Justin Hawkins, 28. "It's time to recreate the magic, and perhaps add a little of our own," said Justin. Sultry Jamelia, 23, arrived early with her young daughter to sing her line with Will Young, 25.

Pop babe Rachel Stevens, 26, rushed by and smiled at delighted fans, as did soul beauty Joss Stone, 17.

Robbie Williams, Bono and Dido had already recorded their sections of the song so they were missing.

But boy band Busted turned up to record their bit, while Daniel Bedingfield, 24, and sister Natasha, 22, arrived arm in arm.

"It's the first time I've sung with Natasha since she got famous," said Daniel. He added that he was looking forward to meeting Chris Martin. "He's a hero of me," he said.

Magical

Fran Healy, 30, lead singer of Travis, revealed he had already been recording the backing track.

He said: "The highlight for me was Dizzee Rascal doing a rap in the middle of the song and nailing it in one take. It has been a magical experience."

Yesterday Sir Bob said conditions in Africa had not improved since the first Band Aid. "It sickens me that everyday hunger, they see as normal," he said.

Midge Ure, 51, who helped organise the first disc, added: "There are many who would not be alive today if people hadn't bought that song."

"Just by making a record like this, we've shown we can change things."

Retailers expect to sell about 500,000 copies in the first week when the record is released on November 29.

One day to wait!

FANS will get their first chance to hear the new Band Aid single on Radio 1 tomorrow. Woolworths and Virgin have pledged to give all proceeds from the £3.99 single to the Band Aid charity and Chancellor Gordon Brown will not charge VAT on the sales.

Bookies William Hill are so sure it will be the Christmas No.1 that they are offering to pay out to punters who back the disc that finishes second.

Mobiles will be our passport to loving

IT'S A PHONE ROMANCE

by IAIN BURCHELL

MOBILE phones will be running our love lives within the next five years, experts claimed last night.

And they reckon the new 3G phones will control almost every other aspect of our daily routines – including the way we work and the way we spend our free time.

The latest phones have a TV, computer, camera, music player and games console, all rolled into a cool pocket-sized handset.

They provide...

● A home entertainment centre: Watch your favourite Premiership team's goals, download the latest music releases, play quality computer games and even watch one-minute dramas and soaps called "mobisodes".

● A mobile encyclopedia: Surf the Internet at high speed for whatever information you need, wherever you are.

● A passport to romance: Give up on blind dates or speed dating and meet the man or woman of your dreams using video calls. See who you are talking to while you find out all about them – much more useful than sending those raunchy text messages to a faceless, mystery person.

● A portable office: Send reports and memos via e-mail or hold a video conference without having to go near a desk.

● A communication centre: It's easy to forget with all the other options, but you can still make calls on them.

Vodafone spokesman Bob Padovan said: "Mobile phones are already transforming people's lives in ways we could not even imagine a few years ago."

Exciting

"They're opening up huge possibilities for users."

"It used to be that when you left the house you'd always grab two things – your car keys and your wallet. Now there's a third thing that has been added to that list – your mobile."

He added: "If you think how phones have developed in the last couple of years, you'll realise that the potential for the future is very exciting."

"Within a few years we went from voice to texting to the point where we have video calling, and I think the future will see enormous possibilities being opened up that will truly change the way we communicate."

Vodafone's £20bn investment in 3G is set to spark a fierce battle for users among the mobile phone giants.

Orange, O2 and T-Mobile will join the 3G fray in the coming weeks. And the Christmas battle lines are being drawn up.

ART'S A CALLING

THE next time you take a snap with your mobile you could be creating a piece of art.

Mobile phone photography is being billed as an art form in a new exhibition, which opens on Wednesday.

DAILY STAR says

Asylum is total farce

ANOTHER day, another set of disturbing revelations about our immigration system.

Ministers have been forced to stop sending asylum seekers to certain cities and towns.

This was prompted by police warnings that the policy was whipping up racial tension and violence. Nottingham, Manchester, Derby and Burnley are among the places where there are fears of trouble.

Meanwhile a Whitehall whistleblower has told of the "lies and excuses" asylum seekers use to stay in Britain.

Anwar Rizvi says they pretend to be gay or mentally ill in order to gain exceptional leave to stay.

Officials turn a blind eye to the abuse as it improves the asylum figures.

Home Secretary David Blunkett has presided over the immigration fiasco for more than three years.

Still there's no end in sight to the cascade of scandals that have marked his spell in charge.

His time is up.

Bob's band of heroes

SOME bookies were refusing to take bets on which single will top the Christmas charts.

Band Aid 20 seems to be a certainty. This charity crusade has united the best of British pop, soul, rock and rap.

The list of names involved in this recording is breathtaking:

Paul McCartney, Robbie Williams, Dido, Will Young, Rachel Stevens, Jamelia, Joss Stone...

At the centre of it all, of course, are the inspirational Sir Bob Geldof and his sidekick Midge Ure.

They've raised more than £100million since the historic 1984 event to save people from starvation in Africa.

Here's hoping the money rolls in again.

No need to cry, Louis

X FACTOR judge Louis Walsh broke down in tears after he booted his group Voices With Soul off the show.

Come on, Louis, they really weren't that bad!

Police chiefs warn Blunkett over immigration WE JUST CAN'T TAKE ANY MORE

by IAIN BURCHELL

ASYLUM seekers will not be sent to seven racial tension hotspots after police warned: "We can't take any more."

Top officers urged Home Secretary David Blunkett to halt the flow of refugees into their towns as they fear clashes between new arrivals and angry locals.

Mr Blunkett bowed to demands from police in Burnley and Nelson in Lancashire, Derby, and Bootle in Merseyside, who insisted asylum seekers should be housed in other areas.

He also stopped immigrants being sent to large parts of Manchester and Doncaster after outbreaks of violence - and Nottingham, where residents feared their city was being overrun.

Shambles

Latest figures from the end of 2003 showed the seven areas had at least 6,100 asylum seekers between them.

A Home Office spokesman explained: "The whole point is to avoid any tension and not put a burden on any one particular area."

But Shadow Home Secretary David Davis blasted the Government's immigration policy as a "shambles".

He said: "For the police to demand a halt to Government policy shows Labour have lost control."

Sir Andrew Johnson, chairman of campaign group Migration Watch UK, added: "These suspensions are a clear sign of the growing strain resulting from the very large flow of asylum seekers in recent years."

The police move was revealed in a Government response to a written Parliamentary question.

Doncaster Police convinced Mr Blunkett to stop sending "single Middle Eastern males" after a local man was stabbed in a fight between a group of Iraqi asylum seekers and residents.

Seven men were arrested and bailed on public order and assault charges.

Police have now agreed to withdraw their call for an immigrant suspension after a "cooling down" period.

Local councillors in Derby have claimed they are "buckling under the strain" of housing 1,130 asylum seekers, double the number they were expecting.

Burnley was shaken by race riots three years ago and the town has been off the list for asylum seekers since December 2002.

The suspensions in Bootle and Manchester, which has a large population of Iraqis, are also believed to be recent.

Almost 50,000 asylum seekers have been scattered around the country by the Government's immigration policy since 2000.

BLAST: Tory Malins

Freezer peril of illegals

ILLEGAL immigrants are risking their lives by hiding in frozen food lorries, it emerged last night.

The stowaways suffer deadly sub-zero conditions to fool thermal scanners which detect signs of heat or heartbeats.

Last week, four immigrants nearly died after sneaking on to a lorry in Belgium that was bringing frozen chips to the UK. They were discovered by a shocked lorry driver who heard them crashing around in the back.

Money

Road Haulage Association spokesman Heather Bond said: "Regardless of how much money gets spent on this technology it still seems that illegals manage to get through, simply because they can be so resourceful in where they hide on board lorries."

Tory Shadow Home Affairs Minister Humfrey Malins said: "It also shows how the immigration shambles under this Government has left our borders still vulnerable."

Driver Philip Blunden handed the four immigrants in his lorry to police in Wiltshire.

The men were freezing and barely conscious. Mr Blunden believes they boarded when he stopped to fill up with fuel in Dunkirk.

You can stay if you're gay

stomach ulcers, the insider claims. Interpreter Anwar Rizvi says the Home Office has helped asylum seekers whose applications have been rejected start a new UK life.

He claims it has been twisting figures by removing failed applicants from the appeals system and offering them "exceptional" leave to stay.

Mr Rizvi works for the Department for Constitutional Affairs in the asylum appeal court.

He described some of the "scams" he says are used to help rejected refugees slip through the net.

His allegations appear to be supported by court records showing 52 asylum seekers have extended their time in the UK by lying about being gay, lesbian or stressed.

The dodgy claims include:

●An Indian woman who said she would be persecuted if she returned because she had cheated on her husband.

●A Serbia and Montenegro man who appealed against deportation because of stomach ulcers and "sleep disturbance".

●An asylum seeker whose lawyers said "mild depression" meant he couldn't answer questions.

●A woman who said she had to look after her brother, who suffered "high blood pressure and a lack of self-esteem".

●A man from the former Yugoslavia who said he suffered from "nightmares" and "anguished stress".

Mr Rizvi says in a statement: "Many of the asylum seekers know that the longer the case drags on, the better their chances are of staying here."

System

"This has led in recent years to the granting of exceptional leave to remain by the Home Office to many thousands of asylum seekers."

"These people had been in the system so long the only way to bring the asylum figures down was to get large numbers of people out of the system by granting them exceptional leave."

Blunkett in terror warning

TERROR network al-Qaida is "on our doorstep and threatening our lives".

That was the warning from Home Secretary David Blunkett on BBC1's Politics Show yesterday.

He said: "I am talking about people who are about to go through the court system."

"They may be found not guilty, but our policing services have been securing our well-being over the last few years."

Speaking on Breakfast with Frost, Met Police chief Sir John Stevens said: "We have thwarted a number of attacks. We have disrupted them."

BBC SET TO LOSE LOTTO

BBC1 is set to lose its exclusive rights to screen the National Lottery in 2006, it was claimed last night.

Operator Camelot is considering ending its deal with the Beeb – because it feels games would be better promoted on ITV or Five.

It is keen to see its live TV draws take place before ITV shows such as The X Factor or Pop Idol which attract millions of younger viewers.

Insiders claim Camelot wants to revamp TV coverage of the Lottery in 2006 when the BBC's contract is up for renewal.

The operator is said to be negotiating with several rival broadcasters.

Channel

Camelot is believed to favour a deal which would see the draws of its seven games screened across different channels.

A senior Camelot source said: "The BBC cannot cover all the games, even if it wanted to. It would have to set up a dedicated lottery channel."

"The first contract, which gave the BBC first refusal on games, was

■ by NIGEL PAULEY

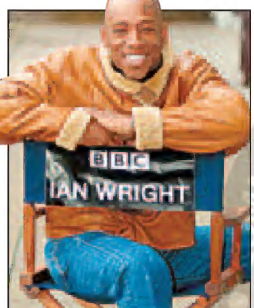

appropriate 10 years ago, but much has changed."

The loss of exclusive rights – which cost £300,000 a year – would be a bitter blow for the BBC.

Lotto shows are seen as a key weapon in the ratings battle and are hosted by big names like Ian Wright, Eamonn Holmes and Dale Winton.

BBC1 currently screens live draws of the Lotto, Lotto Extra and Thunderball games each Wednesday and Saturday.

Under terms of the exclusive deal, the Beeb

NUMBER'S UP: Ian Wright

has first refusal on new games that are launched.

But its decision not to take up the option on the new Daily Play and Euro Millions angered Camelot and is believed to have prompted the re-think.

War

BBC executives are concerned that they could get drawn into a costly bidding war if ITV1 or Five set their sights on the main lottery draw.

The BBC declined to comment, insisting details of its deal with Camelot are confidential. Camelot also refused to comment.

■ SCHOOLGIRL Kerry Naylor, 14, has been suspended from her school for refusing to take off a hat in class after raising money with a charity head-shave. Kerry wore the hat because she feared being teased and bullied by other pupils at King Edward VII School in Merton Mowbray, Leeds. Her charity appeal has so far raised £30 to help a seriously-ill child.

Crash tributes

THE victims of last weekend's train crash were remembered alongside those who died in both world wars yesterday.

Residents of the Berkshire villages near the Ufton Nervet level-crossing – where six people died when their high-speed train hit 48-year-old Brian Drysdale's car – gathered at St Mary's church, Sulhamstead Abbott.

London Ambulance Service, which attended the crash, laid a wreath of poppies outside the church following the special Remembrance Sunday service attended by Tory MP John Redwood.

Axe on Xmas spend spree

by IAN FLETCHER

THRIFTY Brits are giving Santa the sack by slashing their Christmas spending. Shoppers expect to spend an average of £423 – down from £446 in 2003.

And fewer intend to whack the plastic – 19% will run up their credit cards compared with 22% last year.

“People are being realistic about what they can afford to spend on Christmas this year,” said Angus Porter of Abbey, which ran the survey.

“Four interest rate rises this year may be starting to bite.

“Smart shoppers will be paying as they go with savings or talking to their banks about interest-free deals.”

Trend

But younger shoppers are bucking the trend.

Those aged 15 to 24 aim to increase their Christmas spending to just under £300, up from last year's £251.

The 35-44 group plan to splash out most – an average of £622, down from £654.

It's the 55 to 64-year-olds, who will really tighten their belts, spending around £344 compared to £449 last year.

Yuletide dinner table favourites such as roast potatoes, mince pies and Christmas puddings are under threat because of a shortage of lard, industry experts warned yesterday.

No knix for me, she says

SCREAMING girl fans got their knickers in a twist over soccer idol David Beckham yesterday.

Meanwhile his wife Victoria is revealing she never has that problem – because she goes commando.

Victoria, 30, who put her music career on hold to design jeans for Rock & Republic, said thongs are a thing of a past.

“Everyone's showing their thong out the back of their jeans,” she said.

Chased

“But you shouldn't wear any. You get a better line if you wear NO knickers.” Meanwhile, the girls were panting for her husband when he ventured out on a solo shopping trip in Madrid.

England captain Becks, 29, was chased out of designer store Dolce & Gabbana by the cheering teenagers, all desperate to take a photo of their hero.

But the Real Madrid ace managed to escape to his silver Lamborghini, stop-

Posh said she's already thinking of a name for the new baby, following the quirky choice of Brooklyn and Romeo for the couple's first two sons.

And, since Becks's move to Spain, she said, they have grown to love the country so much that she might choose a Spanish moniker.

“We haven't got a name yet,” Victoria explained.

“I might shock everyone and call it Juan and be done with it – Juan Beckham or San Miguel Beckham.”

Victoria is also reported to have said that she and David are planning to have more and more children.

“I love a big family,” she confessed.

“We're lucky enough to be able to afford a big one. I'd like four or five children.”

Sir Elt, you are a f gem

WHAT a shame they can't upgrade Sir Elton to a Damehood. Dame Elton has such a lovely camp ring to it.

He'd be a more convincing pantomime dame than John Inman or Christopher Biggins.

Altogether now, "it's BEHIND you!" He'd be a flouncier, more flamboyant dame than Dame Vera Lynn or Dame Judi Dench. Let's face it, a knighthood doesn't even begin to do justice to the tantrums, tiaras and tirades of four-letter words that flow from the bee stung lips of the man formerly known as Reg.

Bless him, Sir Elt is 57. It's an age at which even the angriest young men suddenly mellow into Val Doonican.

For a moment there, when Princess Di died and he sat stage left of the Queen warbling Goodbye England's Rose, we thought he might have come over all establishment. For all we knew, he'd buy a corgi, become a court favourite and begin trudging about the countryside in jodhpurs.

Madonna's done it. One whiff of British royalty and she put on a flat cap and started picking up dead pheasants.

Thank god Elton's not such a sap. He may have got the gong. He may have fallen in monogamous love with "Mrs John" David Furnish, the man he'd like to marry, but pipe down and mind his Ps and Qs? Not our Elton.

The delightful thing is that he hurls his expletives all over the shop. Not for Sir Elton the judicious weighing up of rights and wrongs. Instead he wades in and doles out the Fs and Blinds in all manner of haphazardly random directions.

One minute photographers get it in the neck and he calls them "vile, rude pigs"; the next, he brands Madonna a "Fing Mime Artist". Does he know he's putting the cat among the pigeons? You betya. For decades, anything he's uttered has had the potential to end up on front pages all over the world.

He knows he adds enormously to the gaiety of nations and gives us all something to giggle and gossip about over our Weetabix if he says something sensationally controversial with a celebrity sting in the tail.

Was Madonna offended? Do me a favour. She knows it's all about column inches and probably sent Sir Elt a basket of fruit and a Kabbalah bracelet to say thanks.

Who didn't love it when Elt called Cherie Blair's lifestyle coach Carole Caplin "a mindless fing turd". Whether she's actually done anything worse than rub Cherie down in the shower with a loofah, get pregnant by a con artist and dress the said Cherie in stupid pointy boots isn't really the point.

She's one of life's irritants and Sir Elton was selflessly acting on all our behalves by laying into her.

Likewise, his appearance on the Chris Moyles Radio 1 show. No, swearing live on air isn't in the least clever.

Putting Moyles – self-confessed rabble-raising rebel – through the wringer is.

Moyles is much too street to be remotely offended by swearing. His bosses, on the other hand, are not.

So Sir Elton knew he would be split down the middle, wanting to ally himself with his guest, yet fearing the wrath of the management.

Pure bliss for Chris Moyles's well deserved vast swathe of listeners.

We don't know where our knight in shining Versace will direct his venom next, and we don't care.

Long may he carry on carping. Contentment is boring, anger on Elton's scale is pure entertainment.

I'd like to see him marrying David in a vast Hollywood ceremony with Lulu and Liz Hurley as bridesmaids, having a huge spat with the Duchess of York in the vestry and taking big bites out of his bouquet in fury.

The fabulous thing about Sir Elton John is that we very definitely ain't seen nothing yet.

NAUGHTY KNIGHT: No one's safe from Elton

IT'S AGONY FOR LOUIS

X FACTOR judge Louis Walsh wept after booting off his group Voices With Soul.

The girls revealed yesterday that Walsh was in tears in his dressing room after having to pick between his two groups for the second week in a row.

Touching

Sisters Hilda and Grace Campbell and Grace's daughter Corene formed Voices With Soul six months ago after singing together in their church choir.

Hilda, 37, said: "Louis was crying in his dressing room after the show. It was so touching. He chose us to leave because he had to."

But he was devastated. "He just couldn't believe he had to do it a second time."

Louis had to choose between his two remaining groups - Voices With Soul and G4 - as they were both voted into the bottom two.

Sharon Osbourne voted to send Voices With Soul home, but Simon wanted G4 out of the competition instead. So the deciding vote came down to stunned Louis.

■ by TIM RIDER

He picked Voices With Soul because they had been voted bottom for the third week running.

Grace, 42, said: "Louis feels like he is a scapegoat as he is caught between Sharon and Simon."

"Those two are at war with each other and poor Louis has not got a chance. "He does not carry the same weight on screen but he is a fantastic manager."

The girls fear that G4 will be the next to go because they are on Louis's team and believe they are also caught in the middle.

Corene, 25, said: "We want G4 to win. Those guys have so much talent. "But they are also caught between Sharon and Simon. I'm sure they will come back fighting next week and give it their best shot."

Hilda added: This is not the end for us.

"Geri Halliwell's manager has approached us because he thinks we could be big."

Rocker Tabby is now clear favourite to win after bookies cut his odds to 5-4.

The Casualty actress is frequently named among the world's sexiest women in men's magazine polls.

■ But Birmingham-born Sarah, 29, says she wasn't so glamorous as a 13-year-old - as this childhood photo, left, shows.

The ugly duckling has blossomed into a sexy siren and has rapidly become the BBC show's dancing queen.

■ Sarah, who plays Casualty receptionist Bex Reynolds, said: "When I was at school, I was so ugly with braces, big hair and bushy eyebrows. I never thought I'd be glamorous. I suppose it gives hope to us all!"

■ STRICTLY Come Dancing pulled in two million more viewers than The X Factor during the 45 minutes they were on the air together.

Fans go ape for jungle stars list

■ by PETER DYKE

I'M A Celebrity bosses had the nation on edge last night guessing who will make the final line-up for the jungle.

Telly chiefs have managed to keep the full list of 10 names a secret.

But fans will have to wait a little longer for show bosses to come clean early this week. Insiders have revealed there are still a couple of places up for grabs, with producers locked in last-minute talks to finalise contracts.

Even those who just miss out could feature later. Sources say two stars will be put on standby in case any contestants drop out.

A show spokeswoman said last night: "Speculation is always rife at this point. It won't be long now before we reveal who the real cast of celebrities are this year."

"I don't think any of these people would ever have been seen in the same room as each other in the past and now they'll all be stuck in the jungle." The Daily Star has revealed the following celebs have signed up: ex-East 17 singer Brian Harvey, 30, model Sophie Anderton, 27, pictured below, comic Joe Pasquale, 43, Three Degrees singer Sheila Ferguson, 55, former All Saints star Natalie Appleton, 31, and Kylie's ex James Gooding, 29.

6 days to go

Rumble

Star Trek legend William Shatner has also been tipped.

There's already been a rumble in the jungle when a group of Aussies volunteered to be guinea pigs to try out the bush trials.

Two blokes ended up brawling and a couple sneaked off for a romp.

Footage will be screened in an ITV2 show called I'm An Aussie Get Me Out Of Here when the real series ends on December 6.

■ CLEARLY these Big Brother losers have no idea how to tell the time – because if they did, they would know that their 15 minutes of fame is well and truly over.

■ Transsexual Nadia Almada and the most unfunny Emma Greenwood got rather close when they left Browns restaurant together.

■ But 21-year-old Emma scarpered when her mate Nadia, 27, asked for a bit of assistance when her dress needed adjusting.

Oh phew Hugh is leaving

BREATHE A sigh of relief, folks. Bridget Jones star Hugh Grant is planning to quit Britain and set up home in New York with his new girlfriend Jemima Khan.

The 44-year-old actor is so fed up with the attention that he gets in England that he is ready to start again in the Big Apple.

A friend of Grant, who used to date Liz Hurley, said: "He is so much in the limelight. It was bad enough pre-Jemima, but now it's just ridiculous. He can't do anything now and what with Jemima spending so much time in New York, Hugh is seriously planning a move."

So long then, mate.

LIBERTY X star Michelle Heaton is to marry boyfriend Andy Scott Lee in four months.

We're told the lovely couple are trying to keep their big day secret, but we can exclusively reveal they are already planning the big occasion – and it will be screened on TV as part of a Lisa Scott Lee's Osbourne-style documentary, Scott Lee Unlimited.

Our source revealed how the loved-up pair will exchange vows in February and film crews will record the entire day, as well as 25-year-old Michelle's hen night and Andy's stag do.

"Michelle and Andy want their wedding to be a day to remember," said the source.

Happy

"Michelle is a co-star of the programme because she isn't a Scott Lee, but during the series she will be made one."

The pair are yet to get engaged and are likely to leave it until nearer the time because they still like to think they are impulsive, even though the event is already planned.

Nobody is more happy than 23-year-old Andy's gorgeous sister Lisa – formerly of pop band Steps. The 28-year-old is work-

Dressed in a ridiculous leather hooded gilet, singer Kel didn't crack a smile either. Have a word Shazza.

POP Idol star Darius Danesh has quashed rumours he is going out with Gerli Halliwell – claiming he wouldn't go out with her if she was the last woman on earth. We caught up with the 24-year-old at Chelsea's Tryst nightclub where he put the record straight, before slating the former Spice Girl. "I am not going out with her, we have done a bit of work together but that's it. I would never go out with her – ever." Surely she must feel the same.

SATURDAY night simply wouldn't be Saturday night without Abi Titmuss falling into a taxi. This time the 28-year-old got rather worse for wear at the Embassy club in London.

She'd spent the night flirting with a mysterious tall, handsome man.

Bet poor old Mattie, 21, from Busted won't be too happy. We hear he's quite taken with the telly babe since seeing her in a pub near their Chiswick homes.

SMITTEN Robbie Williams dumped Georgie lover Lisa Brash because he's obsessed with Aussie beauty Delta Goodrem.

And the 30-year-old singer has told the actress: "Stay celibate until I visit Australia very soon."

Robbie revealed: "Delta, wait. I've seen her, she is very, very pretty and I have had my eye on her for a long time."

The news is also sure to start trouble between the Robster and Brian McFadden, 24, who has been spending lots of time with Delta, 19, recently.

The former Westlife star has been on a number of dates with Delta.

But if Rob has anything to do with it, there won't be many more.

SNUB: Hugh Grant

■ THAT smoothie Hugh Grant proves he's no gent as he has a strop at the premiere of the new Bridget Jones movie, unlike Renée Zellweger, who went down a storm in the London rain. She revealed she is not unlike her alter-ego - she can't find a man and loves a great party.

■ Our OK! Celebrity Chart is based on stars' coverage in Express newspapers - your Daily Star, our sister papers the Daily Express and Sunday Express, and OK!, Britain's best celebrity magazine. It's THE guide to who's hot and who's not that's got everyone talking.
